Excerpt: .he explored deeper waters and caught larger fish. This man was not a monopolist and owed no poorer neighbors an apology for having better means of locomotion than they. It has grown to be the habit of the unsuccessful to class all people who possess comforts and conveniences in one mass with the idle, selfish, and oftentimes dishonest, rich. There are millionaires who came by their wealth through criminal methods. There are capitalists who grind the poor and wrong their fellow men. But it is well to remember that there are also honest, noble, unselfish people with fortunes, and capitalists who are a blessing to the world, to the laboring classes and to humanity. No more unjust and absurd idea ever existed than that mistaken impression of the very poor that all rich or even comfortable people are their enemies and their despoilers. Equally erroneous is the idea that only the poor have troubles, cares or hardships. There are wealthy people who work fourteen hours a day with their brains and hands, trying to do good to humanity. There are men who have become the possessors of large fortunes through honest industry and perseverance, and who are bowed to the earth by the cares and responsibilities of life, and who lie awake nights while poorer men sleep, trying to decide just what is the kindest, wisest and most unselfish course of action to pursue. To be the possessor of a...
