SMALL ANIMAL MODELS OF GAL-MEDIATED AND XENOGRAFT REJECTION : DECIPHERING THE IMMUNOLOGY OF CROSS-SPECIES TISSUE TRANSPLANTATION

VDM Verlag Jul 2008, 2008. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Xenotransplantation offers a potential solution to the worldwide shortage of human tissue available for transplantation. The main immunological barrier to xenografting from pig-to-primate is the antigen, Galactose-alpha-1,3-Galactose (Gal) which is found in all species except humans and other higher primates. Even with the major advancement of deleting Gal from the pig with the aid of cloning technology, complete elimination may be elusive as alternative genes may still produce Gal at low-levels. Thus, the human anti-Gal immune response may continue to be a barrier to successful xenotransplantation. The aim of this book is to demonstrate small animal models of the important components of xenograft rejection and to provide insights into the immune mechanisms of hyperacute, acute vascular and chronic xenograft-like rejection. Both vascularised heart grafts and non-vascularised skin graft models are examined as rejection of solid organs may differ from cellular transplantation. The models of rejection provide a platform for future studies in testing genetic and pharmacological strategies to overcome the xenograft rejection. 200 pp. Englisch.
