Excerpt from Regional and Other Related Aspects of Shellfish Consumption: Some Preliminary Findings From the 1969 Consumer Panel Survey Findings of the study indicate marked regional preferences for individual shellfish items. For example, oysters are consumed in South Atlantic States at nearly double the national per capita rate. Similarly, clams enjoy a high rate of consumption in Middle Atlantic and New England areas. All of which suggests an important correlation between consumption and tradition as well as a persistent tendency for seafood varieties, particularly those consumed in a fresh form, to be consumed in the area of catch. The study also indicated an association between high income households and shellfish consumption, with oysters a single notable exception. Age of consumer, too, has an apparent bearing on shellfish consumption as it was found that older consumers are the more disposed toward consumption of these products. With respect to consumption away from home, it appears that half or more of the crabs and lobsters are consumed in meals outside the home, but the majority consumed of other products was at home.
