Description: In this book, which continues a renowned series of essays published in the Christian Century, thirteen prominent Christian theologians speak—in unusually personal voices—of their journeys of faith and of the questions that have shaped their writing and scholarship. Reflecting a variety of theological positions and approaches, these essays feature decisive encounters with prayer, scriptural tradition, struggles for justice, and religious and cultural diversity. Some of these changes of mind include a change in denominational allegiance, others reflect a shift in method or emphasis prompted by experiences inside or outside the church. Some of the essays display a long-term theological project that unfolds or deepens in changing circumstances. All display the renewed vitality of theology in the postmodern context. Contributors include Paul Griffiths, Sarah Coakley, Mark Noll, Nicholas Wolterstorff, Carol Zaleski, Kathryn Tanner, Scott Cairns, Robert Jenson, Emilie Townes, Peter Ochs, David Ford, Douglas John Hall, and Max Stackhouse. Endorsements: The Christian Century's How My Mind Has Changed series has always offered an invaluable picture of how theologians negotiated the crisis of belief in their time. This illuminating volume, the most theologically diverse in the series, is a compelling and worthy successor to the five that preceded it. --Gary Dorrien, Union Theological Seminary The Christian Century's wonderful and illuminating series, How My Mind Has Changed, has yielded tremendous insights from theologians over the years. Too often we only get snapshots of a theologian's reflections; here we glimpse the development of their thought. This collection gathers together many of the contemporary world's most insightful and engaging thinkers, and the result is a delightful, intellectual feast. --L. Gregory Jones, Duke Divinity School These are luminous essays. Their authors...
